besity of a great military road between the percial and political capitals of the country. That is a vital necessity which must sooner or later be provided for.

POLITICAL STATUS OF THE DISTRICTS RECOVERED FROM THE REBELS .- The recovery by our forces of portions of the rebel States has brought up for discussion a question as to the manner in which the territory thus recovered shall be governed. By one portion of the Cabinet, luckily a minority, it is contended that the act of rebellion dissolves the constitutional rights of the States thus revolted, and that when con quered they will have to begin de novo as Territories. The majority, with whom is the President, are of opinion that when the rebellion is put down the insurgent States will stand precisely as they did before the war broke out, and that their citizens will be entitled to the same rights and protection as they then enjoyed.

This is the only rational and correct view of the subject. If the other were admitted our right to coerce the seceded States at all might legitimately be called in question.

The constitution does not place it in th power of any one portion of a State to disfranchise another by an act of rebellion. Why, for instance, should we punish East Tennessee, supposing it to prove its loyalty when the opportunity arrives, for the persistent treason of the southern and western portions of it? This is not the way for us to bring back the South into the Union.

It is not improbable that before long or generals will find the promise of an amnesty as effective in aiding their progress as the sword An amnesty implies a condonement of past offences, protection of person and property, and a restoration of civil rights. Proclaim this territorial dectrine, and an additional motive will be given to the rebels to resist to the last the restoration of the federal authority over the revolted States. Like the efforts to get Congress to declare slaves free wherever our troops occupy a rebel district, it would not leave us a Union friend in the South. No, on this question, as on that of emancipation, we must stand by the constitution and the dictates of sound policy. To yield to vindictive impulses would only be to place the object that we are struggling for further beyond our reach.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR .- The exclusive intelligence which we published yesterday on the bject, with the additional details which we give tc-lay, of the lodgment of our forces between Fort Pulaski and Savannah, will show that Commodore Dupont and General Sherman are not idle. It appears, too, that General Burnside and Commodore Goldsborough are busily preparing for a speedy descent upon the rebels in North Carolina; that General Halleck's forces are moving down upon Price in Missouri; that our troops from Ship Island have crossed over to the mainland of Louisians: that our brave fellows in Kentucky are delayed from an onward movement only by the miry condition of the roads; and that our grand Army of the Potomac has no other im, pediment against an immediate advance upon the enemy. But as impassable muddy roads must be respected, the rebellion, except on the seaboard, will probably have a respite of a week or two. Barring the weather, however, the war is going on finely, and to an inevitable crushing out of Jeff. Davis & Co.

SPEECH OF THE ENGLISH CHANCELLOR OF THE Excusquer.-We published yesterday the speech of Mr. Gladstone, the English Chancellor of the Exchequer. His is the first official oration upon the Trent affair, and it is remarkable for its contradictions to the statements of Earl Russell and Sir Bulwer Lytton in the speeches which they delivered some time ago. Mr. Gladstone says that England has nothing to fear, but everything to gain, from the prosperity of America, and he represents the English feeling towards us as most friendly and cordial. The English people, says Mr. Gladstone, hope that the North may conquer the South, but are not yet able to believe it. Our readers will at once perceive the diversity in opinion between Mr. Gladstone and the noblemen who have be fore spoken in support of the theory that England was a gainer by secession, and that she was delighted at this evidence of the innate weakness of a democratic form of government. We all know which opinion is best; but the question is, which rightly represents the English government?

RAYMOND'S NEW LOBBY .-- When will the special committee of the Assembly be ready to report upon Speaker Raymond's plan of organizing the lobby? Every one is anxious to know who is to be the lobby chief, and whether Speaker Raymond really intends to manage the affair alone and pocket all the profits. Give us a speedy report.

We inadvertantly omitted to state in our account of the launch of the Ericsson Battery yesterday, that Commander John S. Worden and Lieutenant S. L. Green, United States Navy, have been ordered to her, and were both on her deck yesterday when she was launched.

Bragg arrested at Pensacola in May last, and who lingered in the county jail of Montgomery, Ala., during so many months. He will have a fine opportunity now to repay the rebels for all they caused him to suffer; and we have not the slightest doubt that he will exert his utmost energies to make the name of the battery a word of terror through all rebeldom.

Lieutenant Green is the son of Colonel Green, of this city, and is a recent graduate of the Naval Academy. thaving entered the navy in 1855. He has, therefore, all the advantages of the latest teachings of that institution upon naval gunnery, which will be of the greatest im-portance to him when commanding, as he will in action, the "turret division."

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

The Question of Taxation-Debate in the Assembly-Speaker Raymond's Finan-cial Policy Repudiated-The Financial Plan of the Committee Endorsed-Trea-sury Notes and Taxation Piedged for the Interest-Debate in the Senate Over the Loyalty of Senator Bright-The Advocates for Expulsion of Bright Forced from Their Position—Mutual Ins. crance Companies, &c., &c., &c.

Anany, Jan. 31, 1862.

The debate last evening upon the question of taxation was somewhat spicy and interesting. It was made manifest that Raymond's resolutions were used up; in fact, Mr. Raymond himself arose before the close of the session and asked for the privilege of modifying his resolutions, going almost over to those reported from the Committee of Ways and Means. The most singular speech made on that occasion was that of Rev. Mr. Pruyn, of his argument to prove that paper money was just as good as gold, if Congress passed a law declaring that it should be worth just as much, he endeavored to prove his position by an illustration, in which he brought in the point that a piece of iron, if it only had the stamp of the government upon it, and Congress declared that it should be a legal tender, would be just as good as gold. The reverend gentleman evidently is better posted on the subject of the follies and vanities of the world than he is on the laws and the inexorable logic of commerce. He no doubt is well able to deliver sermons upon the folly of placing trust in riches of this world, and can prove that gold is no better than iron in assisting a per-son in saving his soul; but it is plainly to be seen that he loes not understand the demands of commerce on the undamental basis necessary for a reliable currency. He was roughly handled by Messrs. Stetson and

Pierce, The latter person dealt some severe hits upon the head of Raymond. None of the hits upon the head of Raymond. None of the speakers opposed the issue of all the Treasury notes to be used as currency; but the difference in the position of those who engaged in the debate was on the simple point shall the notes be issued with a direct tax being pledged to pay the interest, or the notes issued, tax levied and left for future session of Congress to say whether it shall be devoted to the interest or for some other cause-One side was in favor of throwing around the subjec such a safeguard that under no consideration could the money raised by tax be misappropriated and applied to

One side was in favor of throwing around the subject such a safeguard that under no consideration could the money raised by tax be misappropriated and applied to any other use than that intended by the taxpayer, while the other side were for leaving the door open; and this is the difference between the position of the orators. Speaker Raymond planted himself on the start on the latter side; but the argument got to be so strong against him that before the session closed last evening he asked the privilege of modifying his resolutions, coming nearly over to the resolutions recorted by the Committee of Ways and Means, thus admitting that he was beaten and compelled to give way to the strong arguments against him.

The question came up again this morning. The Assembly having decided to take a vote before it adjourned, every person who desired to speak on the question had to get himself in readiness for the final struggle. Messrs. Leverindge, Dewey, Wheeler, E. Cornell, Raymend, Alvo d and others participated in the debate, and presented several interesting points, but no now feature was presented, unless it was the statement of Speaker Raymond that the Herrath had always done great service in assailing him on all occasions; but still he would read from an editorial in that paper on financial questions to sustain his position, and give it for what it was worth.

After some delay a vote was reached, and the resolution favored by Mr. Raymond only received thirty-nine votes to sixty-two against. As a matter of course he had to give up as beaten, as everybody knew that he would ever since his famous speech on Tuesday evening last. He offered several other amendments, as did a number of persons on that side; but every amendment to the original resolutions not agreed to by the Ways and Means Committee was voted down, teaving Mr. Raymond in a minority of less than forty members on every vote. On coming out of the Committee of the Whole the same motion was renewed by Mr. Raymond, and the yeas and nays were called, resulting pursued this make a pot as yet been answered on the other side.

Senator Robertson also declared himself against the resolution. Sonator Bright might be a traitor. If so, they had the power to deal with him without an edict from this Legislature. It was a judicial question, and he was content to leave it in the hands of those whose duty it was to investigate the matter, and upon whose shoulders rested the responsibility.

Senator Hardin also made an able speech against the resolution. He said the only argument made on the other side was that the people demanded the removal of Mr. Bright. This, to him, was no argument. If that policy was carried out it would lead to a government by a mob, and remove all safegards around our government. He came here with perfect confidence in the ability of Senator Harris, believing him better able to understand a mob, and remove all safegards around our government. He came here with perfect confidence in the ability of Senator Harris, believing him better able to understand the question than himself, and he was now unwilling to instruct Senator Harris, who has examined the evidence on the committee, to vote against his own convictions. His speech was a strong one, and contained many severe rebukes to those who had appealed to the loyalty and feelings of the Senator on the question.

Senator Brailey next followed in a short and pertinent speech, in which he handled some of the Senators on the opposite side rather reughly.

Senator Low asked him if he believed that Senator Bright was guilty of treason.

Senator Bradley next followed in a short and pertinent speech, in which he handled some of the Senators on the opposite side rather roughly.

Senator Low asked him if he believed that Senator Bright was guilty of treason.

Senator Bradley—I do.

Senator Bradley—I do.

Senator Bradley—I do.

Senator Bradley—I do.

Senator Bradley—I will answer that question. From the general rumor and reports in circulation, I believe that he is guilty, but I have seen only exparts statements, and will not vote to instruct those who have thoroughly examined the question to vote upon it. But if the Senator would introduce a resolution calling upon the proper authorities to try him for treason, and if found guilty punish him, or if innocent give him an honorable acquittal, he would vote for it cheerfully, but he could not give this resolution his support. Several of the Senators questioned Senator Bradley and endeavored to force him into a corner; but on every occasion his nawers silenced his opponents and left them worse than when they attacked him.

At this stage of the proceedings Senator Truman offered a substitute, setting forth in a long preamble a statement in regard to the letter written to Jeff. Davis, and then calling for his expulsion. This was amended so as to read "if this statement be true." This action was an indication that those Senators who were in favor of explicit and full instructions of expulsion had found that they could not carry their point, and were compelled to modify their resolution or fail toget anything whatever. Senator Murphy again spoke upon the question, and made an exceedingly strong speech, remnding the Senators that Senator Bright had a deep interest in this matter, and in a feeling manner alluded to the disgrace that would attend him, his wite and children, should be be expelled from the Senator on the cart of senators here? No; let him have a fair and honest trial, but let us have no one suide almost, and the crying to the senator for instruction there is a decided min, and the crying the se four o clock. All the amendments voted down in the Committee of the Whole were renewed by Mr. Easymond and then, when before the House, on the ages and may called, he was beaten on every vote, and, coming to the of the session, has been badly laid out on a question upon which he staked his reputation, and henceforth he will be found the leader of a minority of less than thirty members. A like result is not to be found in the annals of the State. "How have the mighty fallen." The resultions, as adopted, read as follows:—Resolved (if the Senate concur), That this Legislature regards as indispensable to the maintenance of a sound financial system that the following measures, in substance, should be adopted by the Congress of the United States:—

stance, should be adopted by the Congress of the United States:

1. That a direct tax should be levied and apportioned at once among the several States, according to the provisions of the federal constitution, the net proceeds of which, derived from the loyal States, shall be sufficient to defray the interest of the entire indebtedness of the national government; and that the amount of tax thus apportioned to the loyal States, and paid by them, shall be set apart and pledged to the payment of such interest.

2. That a sinking fund for the reimbursement of the principal of the public debt be created, set apart and pledged to that use.

3. That the amount to be derived from the direct tax of $20,000,000, levied and apportioned among the States pursuant to the act of Congress approved August 5, 1861, tegether with the duties on imports, be employed to defray the current expenses of government.

pursuant to the act of Congress approved August 5, 1861, tegether with the duties on imports, be employed to defray the current expenses of government.

4. That the direct tax to be apportioned among the several states, as before proposed, for the purpose of paying the interest of the national debt, be made a permanent tax to insure the prompt payment of such interest; and that it should be increased from year to year by a new apportionment to be made under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, whenever the increase of the national debt, duly authorized by law, shall make such apportionment necessary.

Resolved, That the people of the State of New York will pay, by direct taxation, their just proportion of the amount required to satisfy the interest of the entire debt contracted by the federal government, and to be apportioned among the loyal States according to article 1, section 2, of the constitution of the United States.

Resolved, That the State of New York will cheerfully co-operate with her sister loyal States, and with the federal government, in a willing submission to all burthens necessary to be incurred and borne, by adopting the financial policy here indicated, believing that it will command the confidence of all persons having money to lend; and that with such a system of finance the government will be able to obtain all the fiscal means needed for the vigorous prosecution of the present war; and under its operation, it is the judgment of this Legislature, that the federal government could never be subjected, under any exigencies, to any probable rate of interest, or depreciation in the value of its stocks, so damaging to its credit and so injurious to the people, as the obtaining of funds by the emission of government paper, to be made a legal tender between debtor and creditor, or by the creation of a stock without specific security for the prompt payment of interest and ultimats redemption of principal.

GREAT FIRE IN FULTON AND PEARL STREETS.

MR. ROBERT M PATRICK:—

DEAR SIR—Defiance Safe No. 6,150, purchased from you, has this day, 3 P. M., been recovered from the ruins of No. 43 Fulion street, which building, with several others, were totally destroyed by fire on the morning of the 20th instant. The Safe, covered with burning rubbish and exposed to an intense red heat for several hours, as the remnants of brass name plates exhibit, on opening, I find the contents—my books, valuable papers, insurance policies, bank bills, &c.—in good order; not a word written but what is perfectly legible. After this severe test, with pleasure I acknowledge the fire proof qualities of your Safe. Respectfully, yours.
